The article "Life of Indigenous Communities During the COVID-19 Pandemic" is a significant contribution to understanding the multifaceted impacts of the pandemic on indigenous communities. It has combined a solid theoretical framework with empirical data to provide meaningful insights. However, it needs the following revisions.

Methodology: The methodology section should provide more details on data analysis techniques.

Results: The findings should be enhanced with more direct quotes from the interviews to give voice to the indigenous communities that participated in the study.

Discussion: The discussion should delve deeper into the practical implications of the findings for indigenous communities and policymakers.
