

Review of: "Life of Indigenous Communities During the COVID-19 Pandemic"

Putri Eyanoer¹

¹ Universitas Sumatera Utara

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

1. The research is attractive as it focuses on the indigenous population - however, there is no clear definition of how the researchers came to the conclusion of it (indigenous) - the first two paragraphs did not support the definition well - and there are several redundancies in the statements.
2. There is no clear explanation of the methods used in this qualitative study such as chosen themes, informant criteria, justification for the criteria, number of informants.
3. The purchasing power of people during the pandemic was the only reason stated which influenced the lives of indigenous people - with such a title addressing specifically the Pandemic Covid-19, more reasons based on data are needed and will give a more comprehensive discussion parallel to the title.