

Review of: ""There Are Challenging Cases for Us": A Qualitative Study of Cypriot Midwives' Experiences Investigating Incidents of Intimate Partner Violence During Pregnancy"

Kripalini Patel

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The study addresses a critical and under-researched area, i.e., Intimate Partner Violence. This is a significant contribution to both the local and global understanding of IPV in antenatal care. However, I have some feedback that can improve the quality of the manuscript:

- Can you specify any particular statistics or studies on IPV in Cyprus that would strengthen the introduction?
- Could you suggest specific demographic details about the midwives (e.g., age, years of experience) that would be useful to include in the method section?
- Can you recommend how the authors could compare their findings with those of other relevant studies in the discussion section?