The manuscript shows an extended distribution of Henckelia infundibularis from Tibet to Arunachal Pradesh in India. It can therefore contribute as a new record for India and is suitable for publication.

However, the MSS has many errors, mainly in the species description, as the scales given in photographs do not tally with size measurements given in the text, which is a serious concern.

There are many grammar mistakes mentioned within the comments.

We normally prefer the herbarium specimen number mentioned in the specimens examined for authentication, best if an image can be provided as well, but that depends on the journal editor if he has space to accommodate.

The manuscript in its present form cannot be published, although the record is useful. It is acceptable only after suggested corrections are made.
