The authors propose a relevant topic, given that the challenges generated by the pandemic, examined by the research team, are found in all fields of activity. Moreover, based on the specialized scientific literature, the authors manage to evaluate the impact of the pandemic on public health, the economy, education, and social dynamics. However, we suggest that the authors clearly highlight their personal innovative scientific contributions to the specialized scientific literature, especially since the cyclical nature of pandemics is being explored.

Additionally, we suggest that the authors highlight the researched results more through graphical means, specifically with more figures and tables showing the impact data.

The presented conclusions should highlight the practical applicative implications of the study, along with the limitations identified by the authors, as well as future research. We congratulate the research team for the analysed topic and propose a few suggestions for its revision.
