

Review of: "Media Framing of African Refugee Migration to Europe: An Analysis of Narrative Constructions From Selected Global Media Houses in 2023"

Adebusuyi Isaac Adeniran¹

¹ Obafemi Awolowo University Ile-Ife

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The paper is well-written and, indeed, timely. It marks a noticeable contribution to the existing pool of knowledge and scholarship on the larger migration literature. A major strength of the paper is noted in how it establishes apt intersections among politics, media, migration, economics, policy, and the existential perception of a people keen on taking up opportunities within the assumed globalized social space. Nevertheless, the non-inclusion of such media outfits in the likeness of Aljazeera in the sampling process did deny the write-up a more balanced conclusion. Meanwhile, this has not in any way negatively impacted the process that produced the outcomes. It is essentially a commendable write-up.