

Review of: "Growing Confidence and Remaining Uncertainty About Animal Consciousness"

Jonathan Nash

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Dr. Irwin has worked really hard on this paper and should be congratulated, in my opinion. My only constructive suggestion for this latest revision is to capitalize "Consciousness" in order to easily distinguish the notion discussed here from more mundane uses of the term, especially within the medical arena, e.g., loss of consciousness, unconsciousness, and Disorders of Consciousness (DoC).

It seems totally reasonable to suggest that we need a simple way to address what happens to Consciousness during various states of unconsciousness without conflating these two entirely different notions.