Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Pedagogy: scientific discipline that studies education as the formation of the personality; education is a phenomenon inherent to human existence, it does not necessarily take place at school nor is it reduced to mere teaching; rather, it takes place throughout personal history, from birth to death, through socio-cultural relations, as part of the corresponding context.

The object of study is "education".

What is education? The "formation of the personality".

Education also happens outside school; education is not reduced to the teaching/learning process.

Education depends on the educational process and context; the personal history of the individual, the socio-cultural factors and relationships within them.

The methodology of educational work, as opposed to didactics (teaching/learning) depends on the regime and lifestyle.
